RFD-TV Monday Night Live To Host Purina Equine Nutritionists and Veterinarians

Purina Mills offers Free Advice on Feeding Your Horse for Longevity on September 18th.

Three members of the Purina Mills horse technical team will provide information on how to provide optimal nutrition to your horse at every life stage. “Research has shown that proper nutrition can improve the longevity of your horse. It’s important that horse owners understand those details”, stated Dr. Raub, Director of Research and New Product Development Purina Mills Horse Business. Joining Dr. Raub on the “Monday Night Live” RFD-TV program will include Dr. Mary Beth Gordon, Regional Veterinary Nutritionist, Purina Mills Horse Business Group and Scott King, DVM, Veterinary Marketing Manager, with Purina Mills.

A short presentation on optimal nutrition for horses at different life stages will be followed by a call-in question and answer session. “We have a great time doing this type of program at our research facility for large commercial farm managers and trainers. It’s going to be even more fun to provide this information on a national program to thousands of horse owners”, said Scott King DVM.

Horse owners can attend a similar presentation in their neighborhood this fall when the Purina Mills Horse Health Fair comes to their town. Join the Purina Technical Team on “Monday Night Live” to hear more about this or to find the Horse Health Fair nearest you go to www.purinamills.com

With horses living longer these days and nutrition playing such a role in the recovery and come back of many older horses, there are many great senior horse stories out there. This is why Purina Mills is sponsoring the “Senior Horse Tales” Contest. Tune in to “Monday Night Live” to learn how one lucky horse owner can win one ton of Equine Senior® Horse feed or visit equisearch.com for more details or to enter.
